

Year 5 Blog - Week commencing 17th June 2024

Hard work pays off!

This week, Year 5 have worked incredibly hard on their assessment papers. As a team, we are incredibly proud of their maturity towards these assessments, their determination and resilience. It is clear that they are becoming ready for Year 6, where we know they will thrive. Well done!

We really enjoyed our travelling book fair afternoon on Wednesday. We selected a great range of books to read. Thank you again to those parents that came in and read with their children.

In writing, we have been planning and forming our newspaper report about another ancient pharaoh being discovered within the depth of Egypt's pyramids of Giza. We've made a fantastic start using past tense verbs, writing in the third person and including a range of descriptive devices. We have also seen children using their learning from across the year by including relative clauses and parenthesis! Keep up the great work Year 5 😊.

We are looking forward to next week; completing our writing and learning our new maths unit on negative numbers.
