

Year 5 Blog – Week Commencing 15.05.2023: Flower Fun!

Year 5 have had an exciting week this week, continuing to learn about Africa!

In writing this week, Year 5 have finished their narrative stories and written their own Dinka poem. This includes a poem about a chosen African animal. The teachers have been blown away by the children's fantastic use of similes, metaphors and personification to describe their animal.

In maths this week the children have developed their understanding of coordinates and translation! They have learnt how to plot points and translate shapes.

During PE this week, the children were split into their house's and competed against each other in games of rounders!

In science, the children had fun dissecting a flower, where they learnt about the pollination process of plants.

Finally, in this week's history lesson, the pupils learnt about famous Pharaohs through research on their Chromebooks!

Well done on another great week Year 5!
