

Week Commencing 16.01.23: An Underwater Adventure!

This week in year 4 we have been continuing our writing to entertain pieces. We are writing an underwater adventure story! Our stories are full of creative, imaginative ideas which focus on a camera discovering a new underwater world! Some of our worlds that have been discovered involve, octopi having a disco, sharks playing football, mermaids galloping around on seahorses and even stingrays sitting in a classroom reading The Diary of a Wimpy Kid! We have worked really hard to include some new features into our writing including onomatopoeia phrases and alliteration!

In science this week we were learning about a variety of animal habitats such as, grass lands, deserts, mountains, wetlands and polar regions and thought about what animals may survive best in these locations. We then got to explore the school! We identified various habitats that we have on our school grounds and went to see what types of species we could discover! We got to use the magnifying glasses so we could spot even the tiniest animal!

This week we got a visit from The Music Man! He came to deliver an assembly and told us about all kinds of instruments and how you play them - he told us all about the science behind the soundwaves and how we can hear the notes he was playing! We got to hear him play some recognisable pieces of music such as Hedwigs Theme, the Jurassic Park theme song and even Baby Shark!

We were lucky enough to get to hear some of the children from Kents Hill Infant School read to us this week! We were some impressed with their excellent reading and we got to read our books to them too. It's been a very exciting week!
