

Year 6 Blog – Week Commencing 9th June 2023: SATs Week – Complete!

We could not be prouder of all of our fantastic year 6 pupils. The resilience and determination they have put into this week has been phenomenal and a true credit to all of their resolute characters. We have thoroughly enjoyed all of our extra break times with the pupils and eating scrummy breakfast with them each morning. Despite all their qualifications, it appears that cooking toast without it being burnt is beyond the year 6 teachers!

We have looked forward to Friday afternoon all week, when we could spend time with the children without the pressure of an upcoming exam. Today, we have also revealed what our year 6 production will be – don't forget to ask your child and encourage their thespian spirits for the upcoming auditions.

This was a tough week, with challenging papers, however every pupil has shown how truly brilliant they are. SATs aren't a measure of character but we have measured that they are all incredible.

Have a relaxing weekend – everyone deserves it!
